Abstract

Correspondence, memoranda, minutes, reports, proposals, contracts, accounting and finance records, flyers, brochures, calendars, notes, press releases, photographs, resumes, and other materials relating to the founding and activities of the Gay Community Services Center (now the Gay & Lesbian Center) in Los Angeles, the first and largest such institution in the United States. The core of the collection consists of records for the period 1971-1977. The materials document the planning, founding, early history, and day-to-day operation of the Center. Almost half the collection consists of records of the Center's programs. These records are particularly important as they document the earliest programs of their kind specifically targeting the gay and lesbian community: the records of the alcoholism and venereal disease control programs are particularly extensive. The importance of many of these records extends beyond the gay and lesbian community, as many programs, such as the drug education program funded by the National Free Clinic Council and the Alcoholism Program for Women, were utilized by the community at large. Other documents detail the Center's three-year struggle to obtain tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service, as well as the internal struggle that led to the dismissal of the Feminist 11 and the subsequent strike that almost destroyed the Center. The collection contains extensive notes by activist Morris Kight, one of the signatories of the original articles of incorporation, who was particularly active in fundraising for the Center. The collection also contains extensive correspondence with Los Angeles politicians, in particular City Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson and County Supervisor Ed Edelman, who were early and active supporters of the Center and its programs. A collection of photographs documents the early history of the Center.

History

In Spring 1971, a group of activists from the Gay Liberation Front (GLF) and the Metropolitan Community Church (MCC) held a series of meetings at the home of GLF activist John Platania, to create an organization to provide social services for members of the gay and lesbian community, many of whom were marginalized and on the street, in the Hollywood/Silverlake area of the city of Los Angeles and in the adjoining unincorporated area of West Hollywood, in Los Angeles County. Platania, who had worked for the Los Angeles Community Development Agency, drew up a detailed development plan for a nonprofit corporation to offer services based on the gay hot line and services for street people instituted by the MCC, and the Liberation House, a crisis housing facility at 1168 North Edgemont, in Hollywood, opened by the GLF's Survival Committee. The formal proposal, prepared by GLF activist Don Kilhefner, was submitted on July 14, 1971, and the articles of incorporation were signed by Morris Kight, June Herrle, James Kepner, and John Platania on July 22, 1971. The articles were filed in the office of the California Secretary of State on January 4, 1972.

The Gay Community Services Center opened its doors in October 1971, in a run-down Victorian house designed by William Eastlake, at 1614 Wilshire Boulevard. A second Liberation House, at 1322 North Van Ness Avenue (formerly a residence of filmmaker Jack Warner) and a Gaywill Funky Thrift Shoppe, at 1519-1521 Griffith Park Boulevard, were already in operation. Kilhefner was appointed the Center's first Executive Director.

The Center initially provided hotline, information, referral, counseling, housing, education, and employment services; a venereal disease clinic was opened in October 1972. Services were provided free of charge, with the exception of housing for which a nominal per diem fee was charged. In accordance with the founders' concept of "community", the Center was staffed entirely by gays and lesbians. In addition, most of the staff, including professionals and paraprofessionals, were volunteers, although a small number of full-time core staff members received minimal "survival stipends". The Internal Revenue Service refused to grant the Center non-profit status until April 1974, and as the Center was unable to obtain government funding without this certification, it was forced to depend entirely upon donations for the first year of its existence. In 1972, the Center served approximately 75,000 persons with a staff of 85 full-time and part-time volunteers; its income was reported at $41,678.

In November 1972, the Center received its first grant, of approximately $20,000, for a drug education program, from the National Free Clinic Council (NFCC). Kilhefner and Center Administrative Director Ken Bartley also served as co-directors of a similar grant awarded the Los Angeles Consortium of Free Clinics. The granting of non-profit status by the Internal Revenue Service in April 1974 enabled the Center to apply for public funding, and between August and November the Center received federal and local government grants totaling $410,281, to fund its medical and alcohol and drug abuse programs. The three-year grant from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) to fund the Center's Women's Alcohol Program (WAP) was worth $1 million, a windfall unprecedented for any gay group in the world, and the Center thereby became the first institution with the word "gay" in its name to receive federal funding.

Early in 1975, the building at 1614 Wilshire Boulevard was condemned, and the Center, which had been searching since late 1974 for new quarters, obtained a lease, with option to purchase, on a building at 1213 North Highland Avenue. In April 1975, on the eve of the Center's move to its new home, two events nearly destroyed the Center. An attempt by Center management to divert some of the NIAAA funds to other Center programs was vigorously protested by the WAP program director, Brenda Weathers, and resulted in the transfer of the grant from the Center to a newly incorporated, independent Alcoholism Center for Women, which remains in existence today. At the same time, a conflict arose between lesbian feminist members of the staff and what they perceived to be the Center's patriarchal male-dominated hierarchy. The controversy resulted in the firing of eleven staff members, who in return picketed the Center's new facility on Highland Avenue. The issue, which resulted in the alienation of many donors as well as a significant portion of the lesbian community, was not resolved until 1978. Nevertheless, a number of lesbian activists, including Lillene Fifield, who had been instrumental in obtaining the NIAAA grant, remained with the Center on the grounds that the Center's work in helping the marginalized members of the gay and lesbian community outweighed the sexism evidenced in some quarters.

The Center's programs, in particular the Venereal Disease Control Program, which by providing a safe space for testing was able to identify and treat sexually transmitted diseases earlier than the Los Angeles County Health Department, thus saving the county money, had earned the Center the support of local politicians, in particular county supervisor Ed Edelman and city councilwoman Peggy Stevenson. Thus, despite the controversies of early 1975 the Center continued to expand: annual income for 1975 was $527,050, and for 1976 was $645,306. By this time the number of professional and nonprofessional volunteers had grown to 250, and the salaried staff to 44.

The rapid growth of the Center in the mid 1970s was made possible by the generosity of the Democratic administration of President Jimmy Carter: in particular, by 1981, CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) funds totaled nearly $500,000, (approximately one-third of the Center's $1.8 million budget, and provided the salaries of 41 of the Center's 85 paid staff. The Reagan administration, however, eliminated many social service funding programs, and slashed the budgets of those that remained. Anticipating the end of federal funding for the Center, the Center Board of Directors instituted a robust private donor program to free the Center from the vicissitudes of government funding. Steve Schulte, Executive Director of the Center from 1979 to 1983, who had earned a political science degree from Yale and had worked for the Los Angeles City Council, recast the Center, which had retained the "casualness about dress and rules" of its founders, as a serious, "respectable" institution that would appeal to mainstream donors.

Scope and Content and Container List

This collection contains correspondence, memoranda, minutes, reports, proposals, contracts, accounting and finance records, flyers, brochures, calendars, notes, press releases, photographs, resumes, and other materials relating to the founding and activities of the Gay Community Services Center (now the Gay & Lesbian Center) in Los Angeles. The core of the collection consists of records for the period 1971-1977. These materials were probably transferred to Jim Kepner's archives sometime in the late 1970s or early 1980s. An inventory of the collection made at or about the time of its transfer, indicates that the records were originally filed in four file drawers and three boxes; although by the time the collection was processed the materials listed had been randomly dispersed between 19 boxes, it was possible to identify most of the materials from the original deposit, and the collection has been arranged to follow as much as possible the original order. The remainder of the collection, covering the period from the late 1970s to the early 2000s, consists of materials collected by Kepner and others; these materials were found stuffed in boxes with no apparent arrangement or order. Those materials considered important to an understanding of the history and activities of the Center have been integrated into the collection; the remaining documents, consisting largely of direct fundraising, promotional, and what appear to be duplicate materials, have been placed in boxes at the end of the collection, and will be processed and integrated into the collection as time permits.

Of the corporate records of the Center, the minutes of the Board of Directors are incomplete except for the years 1987-1988. However, minutes or drafts do survive for the critical months of April and May 1975, which, together with other materials in the collection, provide a fairly full account of the developments surrounding the dismissal of the Feminist 11, and the subsequent strike that threatened to destroy the Center. The records include extensive notes by Morris Kight: while some of these may have been part of the original deposit, the majority appear to have been sent by Kight (who was obsessed with his legacy) to Kepner at a later date. Note that much of Kight's material from 1973 and 1974 was typed on chemically treated paper, which has now darkened to the extent that the original writing is difficult, if not impossible, to read. An important file of correspondence with the Internal Revenue Service, which refused to grant the Center tax exempt status, thereby effectively denying it access to federal funding, until 1974, reveals the homophobia pervasive within government agencies in the 1970s.

Of the administrative records, the General Correspondence, Staff Memos, Management Collective, and Program Directors files are the most useful for tracing the daily operations of the Center. The 1971 organizational study, which constituted the blueprint for the Center, documents the extensive planning that preceded the creation of the institution. The Center in its early years had difficulty keeping accurate financial records, which may explain the relatively few financial statements in the collection; to offset the absence of these records, certain accounting materials, which would normally have been de-accessioned, have been retained. Publicity materials include correspondence with local newspapers concerning homophobic content and documents relating to the Center's response to the portrayal of gays and lesbians in television programs. Photographs include a series taken in 1971 by Lee Mason of the Center's original offices at 1614 Wilshire Boulevard and of the Funky Gaywill Shoppe on Griffith Park Boulevard; photographs from the 1980s and 1990s derive largely from the office of Los Angeles County Supervisor Ed Edelman, and document his work on behalf of the Center.

Records of its various fundraising programs indicate how aggressive and inventive the Center was at raising funds. The records of the Wilshire Volunteer Services Fund, set up in 1972 to obtain general donations in cash and kind, and of the Building Fund, set up in 1976 to purchase the Highland Avenue facility, are particularly full, and include correspondence and receipt books. Correspondence files document the Center's unsuccessful attempts in the 1970s to obtain funding from private foundations. The extensive correspondence and funding proposal files of the Public Funding Task Force, led by Morris Kight, document the Center's aggressive pursuit of funding from all levels of city, county, state, and federal government. The Calendars and Events series includes records of fundraising events, including yard sales, celebrity roasts, gala dinners and receptions, and special theatrical events

The largest series in the collection comprises correspondence, memoranda, reports, proposals, contracts, accounting and finance records, flyers, brochures, notes, and other materials relating to the programs offered by the Center. The materials are fullest for government-funded programs, and document in particular the Center's drug education program funded by the National Free Clinic Council, 1972-1974; the Alcoholism Program for Women (APW), 1974-1975; the activities of the Van Ness House in the Center's Alcohol/Drug Abuse Program; and the Venereal Disease Control Program (VDCP; from 1977: Sexually Transmitted Disease Control Program, STDCP) and other medical programs. The records of the National Free Clinic Council program contain information on populations outside the gay and lesbian community, as Don Kilhefner and Ken Bartley also served as co-directors of the Los Angeles County Council of Free Clinics' drug education program. The Alcoholism Program for Women, funded by a three-year, almost $1 million grant from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, was removed from Center jurisdiction and transferred to the newly incorporated Alcoholism Center for Women in June 1975.

Other programs for which materials survive include CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act), a job training and placement program under which the Center also paid the salaries of almost half its paid staff. The records of the Educational Outreach program include correspondence of the Speakers' Bureau, which provided trained speakers for school and college classes and civic groups. The records of the Housing program include lists of residents of several of the Center's "Liberation Houses", for short-term emergency housing. The records of the Resource and Referral program include a resource binder with additional fact sheets on gay and lesbian (and gay and lesbian supportive) institutions, organizations, and businesses. The Center also promoted the self-development of members of the gay and lesbian community and the records of the Self-Development program include materials by Betty Berzon and Newt Deiter on group and peer counseling, as well as materials on raps, growth groups, and workshops.

Many of the program files contain correspondence with Los Angeles politicians, in particular City Councilwoman Peggy Stevenson and County Supervisor Ed Edelman, who vigorously supported the Center and its activities. In addition, the records of the Center's political activity include correspondence from 1975 with California assembly leaders on the decriminalization of consensual private acts, and with the offices of Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and District Attorney John Van De Kamp. A major goal of the Center was to improve relations between the Los Angeles police and the gay community, and additional documents on this issue can be found in the Subject Files series. The records of the Prison, Probation and Parole program, which assisted the reintegration into society of gay prisoners (including those incarcerated for consensual sexual activities decriminalized in California in 1976), include correspondence with prisoners, probation officers, and prison officials.

The extent and nature of the services offered by the Center to women and youth was the subject of considerable discussion in the 1970s, more radical lesbians, in particular, feeling that their concerns were overlooked and marginalized. The records of the Youth Services program, known in its earliest years as Gay Youth of Los Angeles, are fragmentary, but include a manual for Center youth workers, circa 1972. The records of the Women's Services program are only slightly more complete, but include the proposal and contract for the Lesbian Resource Program for Self-Development (the forerunner to Lesbian Central of the 1980s), funded by the Los Angeles County General Revenue Sharing (GRS) program.

The collection contains an incomplete set of newsletters published by the Center, including some printed for the general public, and others for "internal" circulation. The People series contains materials relating to individuals connected in one way or another to the Center: the files for activist Morris Kight and County Supervisor Ed Edelman, in particular, document their roles in the Center's history and development. The Subject Files series contains a small number of original subject files found among the Center records. These include a police file, with correspondence, memoranda, and other materials relating to the Center's work to improve relations between the Los Angeles Police Department and the gay and lesbian community, and Linda Poverny's 1984 PhD thesis on the management of the Center during its first ten years.

Series 1. Corporate

Dates: 1971-1988

Extent: 0.7 linear foot

This series contains the corporate records of the Center. It is divided into two subseries: (1) Corporate, and (2) Board of Directors.

Subseries 1.1. Corporate

Dates: 1971-1979

Extent: 0.2 linear foot

This subseries comprises original and amended Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, a lengthy correspondence with the Internal Revenue Service relating to the Center's application for tax exempt status, which was not granted until April 1974, and correspondence with various departments of the California state government relating to the Center's status as a California corporation. The correspondence with the Internal Revenue Service reveals the pervasive, institutionalized homophobia within the Service in the early 1970s.

Subseries 1.2. Board of Directors

Dates: 1971-1988

Extent: 0.5 linear foot

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries comprises minutes, memoranda, reports, correspondence, notes, and other materials relating to the functions and activities of the Center's Board of Directors. The records are incomplete except for 1987-1988, which include a photograph of the Board members. The records for 1971-1977 contain extensive notes by Morris Kight; those for April and May 1975 illuminate the strains within the Center that led to the dismissal of the Feminist 11, and the development of the Board response to the resulting strike. The files on the dismissal and strike of the Feminist 11/16 contain flyers, handbills, broadsides, correspondence, newsletters, and affidavits from both sides, as well as a number of legal papers from the lawsuit (Cordova v. Gay Community Services Center) filed by the dismissed workers against the Center; the lawsuit was not settled until 1978.

Dates: 1971-2001

Extent: 3.4 linear feet

This series comprises the administrative records of the Center. It is divided into five subseries: (1) Administration, (2) Financial Records, (3) Personnel, (4) Publicity/Public Relations, and (5) Real Estate.

Subseries 2.1. Administration

Dates: 1971-1984

Extent: 1.1 linear feet

Arrangement: alphabetical

This series comprises memoranda, correspondence, minutes, reports, logs, rosters, and other materials relating to the organization and day-to-day administration of the Center. The 1971 organizational study, by John Platania and Don Kilhefner, was the blueprint for the Center. The materials include few Executive Director files; of these, the file for Dickson Hingson contains substantial correspondence of a personal nature, while the file for Susan Kuhner (which was later used by Steve Schulte) consists largely of materials relating to Kuhner's duties as Director of Programs (she was named Co-Executive Director for Programs in 1978). A more substantial record of the activities of the Executive Director can be found in the general correspondence and staff memos. These records, together with those of the management collective (an experiment in collective management that was abandoned in the wake of the dismissal and strike of the Feminist 11) and the Program Directors meetings and staff meetings, also provide the clearest account of the daily operation of the Center. The records of the Ombudspersons, created in the aftermath of the dismissal of the Feminist 11, relate primarily to personnel matters. The long distance telephone call requests include details of calls to individuals arrested or incarcerated for consensual sexual acts that violated contemporary California state law.

Subseries 2.2. Financial Records

Dates: 1972-1977

Extent: 1.25 linear feet

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries contains the financial records of the Center. The Center compiled annual and periodic financial statements. In addition, as the financial statements as received by the Archives are incomplete, certain accounting records, which would normally have been de-accessioned, have been retained as a substitute. These records have been arranged by year, but no further attempt has been made to sort or classify them. Additional accounting records can be found in the records of individual Center programs and projects (Series 5).

This subseries contains brochures, newspaper clippings, packets, photographs, press kits, press releases, radio scripts, and other materials relating to Center publicity and public relations. The bulk of the subseries consists of press releases relating to the Center and its activities. The history files contain published and manuscript articles, drafts, and notes, many by Jim Kepner; much of the information on the earliest years of the Center is contradictory, and should be used with caution. Other historical accounts of the Center, and of particular programs and projects, can be found in the introductory sections of funding proposals (Subseries 3.8 and Series 5). The photographs include a series taken by Lee Mason in 1971 of the original offices at 1614 Wilshire Boulevard and of the Funky Gaywill Shoppe on Griffith Park Boulevard, Lillene Fifield in 1973, and the Gay Community Services Center offices at 1213 North Highland and the Feminist 11/16 strike in 1975. Additional photographs can be found in Subseries 1.2 and 5.9, Subsubseries 5.10.3, and in the Ed Edelman file in Series 7. The press coverage file contains clippings of accounts of the Center in the Los Angeles and Southern California press, while the press relations file includes correspondence with the Los Angeles Times and other newspapers concerning homophobic content. The television/radio file contains materials relating to the Center's radio program, as well as its response to the portrayal of gays and lesbians in television programs such as "The Prisoner" (1979) and "Gay Power/Gay Politics" (1980).

Dates: 1973-1983

Extent: 6 folders

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries comprises rental and lease agreements, inspection reports, prospectuses, and other materials relating to the properties occupied by the Center. The files on the Wilshire Boulevard properties document the dilapidated condition of the properties and the Center’s contentious relationship with the landlord; the file on the Highland Avenue property, which includes plans, gives an extensive account of the Center’s negotiations to acquire the property.

Subseries 3.2. Special Projects

Dates: 1971-1988

Extent: 0.4 linear foot

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries contains materials documenting several programs instituted by the Center to raise funds. The materials include correspondence and receipt books for the Wilshire Volunteer Services Fund, a chapter of the Volunteer Services Fund—a charitable fundraising organization incorporated in California in 1971—set up in November 1972 by Morris Kight, Don Kilhefner, and Ken Bartley, to enable individuals to make tax-exempt donations to the Center (1) before the Center had obtained tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service, and (2) without making reference to the word “gay” in tax and donation forms. The Fund, which provided the Center in its first two years of existence with a substantial portion of its operating funds, ceased operations at the end of 1974, after the Center had obtained tax-exempt status. The subseries also includes a file of correspondence and receipts relating to the Gaywill Funky Shoppe, which was set up in 1971 at 1519-1521 Griffith Park Boulevard. The Shoppe was never a success financially, and was closed after its manager was murdered on the premises in 1973. Additional materials include a file of miscellaneous papers and membership forms relating to the Friends of the Center, a membership organization set up in 1974 to support the goals of the Center; records of funding appeals and events sponsored by the Friends can be found in Subseries 3.1 and Series 4, respectively. The records of the Building Fund, set up in 1976 to fund the purchase the Highland Avenue facility, include correspondence, receipts books, and pledge forms and invoices; additional information on fundraising events for the Fund can be found in Series 4. The subseries also includes correspondence and notes concerning an unrealized plan to institute bingo at the Center.

Subseries 3.3. Foundations

Dates: 1971-1979

Extent: 0.4 linear foot

This subseries consists of correspondence, grant proposals, and other materials documenting the Center’s efforts to raise funds from private foundations. With the exception of unsuccessful funding proposals to the Erickson Educational Fund in 1973 and to the Los Angeles Bicentennial in 1979, the materials derive from an intensive drive from late 1975 through early 1977, directed by Major Kenneth MacLeod, to obtain foundation support. While the drive resulted in invitations from several foundations to submit proposals, none of these proposals was ultimately successful.

Subseries 3.4. Public (Government) Funding

Dates: 1972-1983

Extent: 1.1 linear feet

This subseries contains correspondence, funding proposals, and other materials relating to the Center’s efforts to obtain government funding support for its programs. Funding proposals form the bulk of the materials; they are arranged alphabetically by funding agency. With one exception, these funding proposals are known, or appear, to have been unsuccessful: successful proposals can be found with other records of the programs and projects to which they relate in Series 5. The records of the Los Angeles County General Revenue Sharing (GRS) Program constitute the exception. From 1974 to 1977, the Center submitted funding proposals to the GRS Program for virtually every Center program; several of these proposals covered more than one Center program. Whenever possible, successful program proposals are filed with the other records of the programs to which they relate in Series 5; however, when a single successful funding proposal affects two or more Center programs, the proposal is filed here, together with unsuccessful proposals, and general correspondence relating to the GRS Program. The GRS Program general correspondence also includes correspondence, minutes, and other records of the Community Coalition for Equitable Revenue Sharing, a group founded in 1974 by Don Kilhefner, Morris Kight, and others to monitor the distribution of GRS funds by Los Angeles County. Note that Center planners often cannibalized materials from older funding proposals, and several proposals are therefore incomplete, or even fragmentary. In addition, the 1977 proposal for a Comprehensive Program of Community Service to Alcoholic Women and Men (box 6:22) appears to be derived from the 1974 funding proposal for the Alcoholism Program for Women (Series 5, box 9:8-9).

L. A. Gay & Lesbian Center Records, Coll2007-010

Series 4. Calendars and Events

Dates: 1971-2003

Extent: 0.8 linear foot

Arrangement: divided into (1) Calendars and (2) Events, each ordered chronologically

This series comprises calendars of classes, raps, workshops, meetings, and other events held by the Center, and of similar events of interest to the gay and lesbian community held by others, as well as flyers, brochures, invitations, correspondence, commemorative booklets, and other materials relating to events sponsored by, or held for the benefit of, the Center. The Center often published several calendars simultaneously, each with a different focus: Center events, community (non-Center) events, women's events, men's events, etc. There is considerable overlap between many of these calendars, and they have therefore been combined and ordered chronologically. Most of the events documented are fundraisers, and range from yard sales to roasts of prominent members of the gay and lesbian community (Sheldon Andelson in 1979 and Gayle Wilson in 1980), annual gala dinners, and to special theatrical performances (Julie Harris in "The Belle of Amherst" in 1976). Other events include Center open houses and art exhibition opening receptions. The events are arranged chronologically. The series does not include records of on-going classes, raps, and workshops, or single presentations held as part of an ongoing series: these records can be found in Subseries 5.15.

The series is divided into 18 subseries: (1) Program Proposals, (2) Alcohol and Drug Control, (3) CETA, (4) Educational Outreach, (5) Employment, (6) Food, (7) Hotline/Switchboard, (8) Housing, (9) Legal Services, (10) Medical Services, (11) Mental Health Services, (12) Political Activity, (13) Prison, Probation and Parole, (14) Resource and Referral, (15) Self-Development, (16) Volunteer Program, (17) Women’s Services, and (18) Youth Services.

Subseries 5.1 Program Proposals

Dates: 1972-1975

Extent: 0.2 linear foot

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries contains program and project proposals (some cannibalized and therefore incomplete or fragmentary) not directed to a particular funding agency, as well as original letters of support from members of the Los Angeles gay, non-gay, and employment services communities; copies of these letters are appended to many funding proposals found in Subseries 3.4 and elsewhere in Series 5.

Subseries 5.2 Alcohol and Drug Control

Dates: 1972-1979

Extent: 2.8 linear feet

This subseries consists of materials documenting various Center programs relating to alcohol and drug control. It is divided into four subsubseries: (1) National Free Clinic Council (NFCC), (2) Alcohol Program for Women (APW), (3) Alcoholism Needs Assessment (ANA), and (4) Alcohol/Drug Abuse Program.

Subsubseries 5.2.1. National Free Clinic Council (NFCC)

Dates: 1972-1976

Extent: 1.3 linear feet

Arrangement: chronological

In November 1972, the Center received its first grant, of approximately $20,000, for a drug education program, from the National Free Clinic Council (NFCC). Center Executive Director Don Kilhefner and Administrative Director Ken Bartley also served as co-directors of a similar grant awarded the Los Angeles Council of Free Clinics. This subsubseries comprises records documenting both programs. The files are arranged into three groups: (1) General, comprising records of the Southern California Council of Free Clinics, (2) Center, comprising records of the Center program, and (3) Los Angeles County Council/Consortium of Free Clinics, comprising records of the program administered by Kilhefner and Bartley. The Center and Council records include contracts, correspondence, periodic activity and statistical reports, and accounting papers; the Council records include monthly activity and statistical reports and correspondence relating to financial matters for each clinic in the Council.

Dates: 1974-1977

Extent: 0.9 linear foot

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries comprises funding proposals, grant applications, correspondence, and financial and accounting records relating to the three-year, almost $1 million grant obtained by Lillene Fifield and Brenda Weathers from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism from its inception in 1974 until it was removed from Center jurisdiction and transferred to the newly incorporated Alcoholism Center for Women in June 1975. The materials include copies of articles of incorporation and by-laws for the Alcoholism Center for Women, as well as correspondence relating to the Alcoholism Center's assumption of authority for incurring debts on behalf of the program. One copy of the original 1974 funding proposal has been updated with additions through June 1977, and may have served as a model for the unsuccessful funding

The Center received funding under CETA titles I, IIb, and VI, from both the City and the County, from 1975 (for the calendar year 1976) through March 1981. While some of the funds were used for job training and placing workers elsewhere, most of the monies were used to hire Center staff. The documents include funding proposals, correspondence, reports, job announcements and descriptions, and publicity materials.

Subseries 5.18. Youth Services

Dates: 1972-1983, 1997 (bulk 1972-1977)

Extent: 0.25 linear foot

Arrangement: chronological

This subseries contains documents relating to the Center's youth services programs, known in its earliest years as Gay Youth of Los Angeles. The materials include correspondence, flyers, questionnaires, meeting minutes, position papers, and extensive manuscript. The earliest records appear to have come from the files of Center staff members Jay Fisher and Dacus Haining. The file on the 1972 Southwestern Regional Conference of the National Coalition of Gay Organizations contains considerable material on the Conference's Youth Platform. The materials also include papers of the national Gay Student Center and the Gay Student Council of Southern California, 1972-1973; a manual for Center youth workers, circa 1972; and papers of the Center's Youth Task Force, 1976-1977. Personal papers of both Fisher and Haining can be found in Series 7.

Extent: 0.3 linear foot

Arrangement: alphabetical

Several Center programs published their own newsletters, some for a public readership (Lesbian Central Newsletter, Empowerment Times, P.C.P. [Peer Counseling Program] Newsletter, and Reach), others (Medical Services Newsletter and Men's Clinic Newsletter) for staff alone. Most titles are represented by only one or two issues.

Series 7. People

Extent: 0.3 linear foot

Arrangement: alphabetical

This series contains materials concerning individuals connected in one way or another with the Center. Approximately half the materials document activities related in one way or another to the Center: in particular, Morris Kight's files contain notes and correspondence relating to his many activities at the Center, and Ed Edelman's file contains correspondence, press releases, and photographs relating to his active support on the County Board of Supervisors for the Center and its programs. The other materials document activities not necessarily related to the Center, including personal correspondence of Jay Fisher, of the Youth Services Program; adoption and other legal papers of Dacus Haining, as well as correspondence from his work with the Services to Juveniles Committee in New Orleans prior to his employment by the Center; and festivities surrounding the arrival of June Herrle's child. Ken Bartley's file includes a curriculum vitae, copies of his letter resigning from the Center, and articles of incorporation for Sun Family, Incorporated, which Bartley used following his resignation to pursue a career in music production and marketing. Richard Nash's file contains copies of several articles by him on gay identity and Unitarian Universalism.
