Overview of Lesson
The FAIR Education Act (Fair, Accurate, Inclusive, and Respectful Education Act) was passed in 2011 in California State Legislature. It advocates for the inclusive representation of LGBTQ and disability communities in California History and Social Science Curriculums. In this lesson, students will participate in pre-reading activities, close-read the SB 48 text and build community amongst peers in the classroom. By the end of the lesson, students will have examined the opinions of those in opposition of the bill and those in support of the bill, including the LGBTQ youth voices who advocated for themselves in the senate hearings (using the framework of Critical Media Literacy by Jeff Share). By highlighting youth agency, this lesson aims to both celebrate the people involved in passing this groundbreaking bill and to provide students with the language necessary to communicate what their rights are.

Procedures

1. Introduce Do Now: Fire Write (write for 5 minutes without stopping)

   “There’s this idea that monsters don’t have reflections in a mirror. And what I’ve always thought isn’t that monsters don’t have reflections in a mirror. It’s that if you want to make a human being into a monster, deny them, at the cultural level, any reflection of themselves. And growing up, I felt like a monster in some ways. I didn’t see myself reflected at all. I was like, ‘Yo, is something wrong with me? That the whole society seems to think that people like me don’t exist?’ And part of what inspired me, was this deep desire that before I died, I would make a couple of mirrors. That I would make some mirrors so that kids like me might see themselves reflected back and might not feel so monstrous for it.” - Junot Diaz

Think-Pair-Share:
Option1: This quote reminds me of...
Option 2: Share thoughts from Fire Write

2. Community Building Activity:
   Pass out 4-5 post-its to everyone. Instruct students to brainstorm various identities that they have and write them on the post-it’s. Give example if needed.

   Instruct students to place post-its on the appropriate poster (try not to reveal these prematurely) around the room, labeled:
   - Hobby/interest
   - Race/ethnicity
   - Faith/spirituality
   - Sexuality, gender identity
   - Job/responsibility
   - Disability
   - Relation to others
   - Socioeconomic
   - Language

   Play music and instruct students to do a gallery walk looking at all the identities posted around the room. When the music stops, find a partner and share about one of your post-its nearby. Repeat this 3-4 times as time permits.
3. Response group:
Instruct students to listen to the statement and move to a spot in the room correlating to “strongly agree, agree, disagree, or strongly disagree.”

- My K-12 schooling represents identities that are important to me.
- My K-12 schooling helps me be proud to be me.
- My K-12 schooling includes LGBTQ stories.
- It’s important to me that I am represented in history classes.

If time permits, use GSA’s Prezi about the Fair Act to introduce it.

4. Pre-Reading/Preview Strategy:
Split students into groups of three by handing out an image, a vocab word, or a definition to each student. Give students 5 minutes to find their group and read the definition to each other. Instruct students to create a short skit illustrating the vocab word.

Possible words:
- state bill (SB)
- senator
- vetoed
- legal right
- judiciary
- discriminatory bias
- sexual orientation
- gender identity

5. Response group - Write-around close-read:
Pass out a poster with excerpts of the SB 48 legal text. Model for students to circle words or phrases and annotate nearby:
- This is interesting but what if/about...
- This is the most important part because...
- A question I have about this is...

Have students pass the posters to the next group. They will be responding to the previous group’s by adding:
- I agree because...
- I disagree because...

6. Instruct students to write a 1-2 sentence summary of their excerpt to report back to the class.

Choose 1-3 questions from the Critical Media Literacy framework (Share 2016). Have students discuss the question with the elbow partner, referencing the video. Use a poster and markers to record answers to the questions from student volunteers.

8. Show video excerpt of youth voices advocating for LGBTQ history in education during the 2011 Senate Judiciary hearing:

Senate judiciary committee part 1 & 2 1:27 part 1, beginning of part 2

Use CML questions to frame discussion with partner. Record answers on another poster.

Assessment
Option 1: Create a meme illustrating your educational rights in relation to the FAIR Act.
Option 2: Use a rubric template (Sample) for students to create a rubric assessing whether a lesson is complying with the FAIR act or not. Sample can be retrieved from https://images.template.net/wp-content/uploads/2015/10/16232820/Blank-Simple-Rubric-Template-Word-Doc.jpg.
